DECLARATION OF COMMON HERITAGE

NAME:

I, _____, hereby declare that the Earth's natural resources are the common heritage of all people.

I recognize that the air, water, land, and minerals of this planet are the fundamental life-support systems for all species and do not belong to any single individual, corporation, or nation. I acknowledge that our current systems of private ownership and monetary rationing often lead to artificial scarcity, environmental destruction, and social inequality.

By making this declaration, I commit to a shift in perspective: from viewing nature as a commodity to be exploited for profit, to seeing it as a shared trust to be managed intelligently and sustainably for the benefit of every human being. I support a transition toward a global society where technology and science are used to distribute these resources equitably, ensuring that the basic needs of all people are met without the need for debt or servitude.

This is my commitment to a future of abundance, cooperation, and the protection of our planet for generations to come.
